RUSSIA BUILDING UP BIG ARMY

Defense Force Will Be Second to None in Europe.

AIR FLEET ALSO TO BE BUILT

Former Secretary of Interior Fall Declares That Soviet Russia is in Better Financial Condition Than Any Other Country in Europe. Russia to Reclaim the Small Nations on Western Border.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Soviet Russia is in better financial condition than any other country in Europe, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall declared here.

Secretary Fall has just returned from an investigation of several weeks into economic and political conditions in Russia.

Discussing Russia's financial standing, Secretary Fall declared that the Russian gold certificate of a par value equivalent to that of the British pound sterling is now being exchanged by Lloyds of London for 5 cents more than the British pound.

While the old paper ruble is still down to about one million to the dollar, the country has established its state bank with its gold currency secured by deposits of about 25 percent of its face value.

Russia is building up an army second to none in Europe, Secretary Fall said. But it is an army of defense, not for aggression, he stated. The country stands in fear of the two dominant powers of Europe at this time, France and Great Britain, he declared.

The present leaders or Russia look on France, with her enormous army and her attitude of aggression, as exemplified in the Ruhr, as a menace to the whole world and a direct menace to Russia. Great Britain is looked on as a capitalist nation with ulterior designs looking to the exploitation of the vast natural resources of Russia whenever the opportunity looks propitious.

Secretary Fall told of how Russia is preparing to meet this situation. If she becomes involved in a war with France it will not be with an army of ignorant peasants, such as that which the czar threw into the world conflict of 1914, which later turned on its leaders and destroyed the czarist government. The present government is paying strict attention to the development of the army. The soldiers are being educated before the military instruction is undertaken. They are being taught history after the viewpoint of the present Russian regime, and are being schooled in the political economy of the outside dangers that threaten Russia and the necessity for self-preservation from those nations who would exploit her.

"This is our answer to Great Britain," is a slogan starting the Russian people constantly in the face from flaming bill boards, in the newspapers, from curb stone orators, in circulars and every conceivable form of propaganda. The answer is a great Russian air fleet.

Secretary Fall sees the day within the next three to five years when Russia will reach out and reclaim the group of small nations carved largely out of her territory that circle her in a ring and separate her from western Europe. This will not be for aggression, but for self-preservation, he said. They include Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia and parts of Finland, Poland and Roumania.

FINE HELD EXORBITANT

Governor Wants the Prohibition Law Enforced "Decently."

Columbus, Aug. 20.—In a statement issued here Governor Donahey attacked "commercialized enforcement," the imposition of exorbitant fines for the sake of revenue that, from, as one of the worst problems of prohibition, and announced the beginning of a campaign for "enforcement with decency."

"I am going to see that the laws are enforced," said the governor, "and enforced with decency, if I can bring about such a condition. The enforcement of law is discredited by commercializing it. Commercialized enforcement brings the machinery of the law into disrepute, and is one of the worst of our problems."

The governor's attack followed a review of a case in which C. A. Stack, a merchant of Millfield, Athens county, was fined $400 for violation of the liquor laws. Stack admitted having a bottle of whisky in his house.

SHOOT SEVEN PERSONS

Bandits Hold Up Dance Hall and Escape With Cash and Gems.

Detroit, Aug. 20.—Seven bandits held up Allendale dance hall, in this city, shot two women and four men, one of them George D. Wilson, vice president of the C. R. Wilson Body company, robbed nearly all the 150 road house guests and concluded their murderous debauch five hours later in Monroe, Mich., by killing Oscar Reinhardt, a motorcycle policeman, who tried to question them.

When the gunmen fled after a far-seeing volley to slow up pursuit they left a dance floor strewn with disheveled women and men, many of whom had fallen to the floor and pulled tables down on top of them as a rampart against the flying bullets. The bandits are estimated to have secured $20,000 worth of jewelry.

NEGOTIATIONS RESUMED TODAY

Anthracite Operators and Miners May Get Together.

AGREEMENT MAY BE REACHED

Both Sides Realize Full Force of Public Opinion, Which Insists That There Be No Strike—Operators Fear Loss of Markets in Case of Suspension—Member of the Coal Commission Talks.

Washington, Aug. 20.—The joint wage scale committees of anthracite coal operators and miners who resumed their negotiations at Atlantic City today are more in a mood to get together, Dr. George Otis Smith, member of the United States coal commission declared.

The prospect of an agreement is more hopeful now than at any time since the joint conference broke up at Atlantic City on July 27, he said, adding: "They have done the thing we had hoped they would do. They are starting off well. While there is negotiation there is hope. Within a few days we believe they will begin to show progress. Of course very little headway can be expected the first day. The only question is to what extent will both sides respond to their obligation to the public. Upon that depends the success or failure of their conference."

The commission will receive a daily report of the progress of the negotiations, through J. A. Gorman, joint secretary of the conference. He is a disinterested party who will give the commission an unbiased review of what takes place.

New factors which have entered the situation in the past two weeks will have an important influence in the direction of forcing an agreement. Both miners and operators realize the full force of public opinion, which insists that there be no strike, and which will back the government in any steps President Coolidge decides to take to prevent a suspension of coal production on the eve of winter.

The operators are frankly worried as to what will become of their markets in the case of suspension. Ever since the first rumblings of coming trouble were heard early last month, the bituminous operators, with an overproduction of soft coal, have been working night and day in preparation for an anthracite strike, which will give them an opportunity of invading these hitherto exclusive markets. The government has apparently conditionally accepted the offer of the bituminous operators to furnish soft coal if there is a shortage of hard coal.

MELLON TO REPORT TO THE PRESIDENT

Reaches the Capital After Studying Conditions in Europe.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Europe's unwillingness to enter into agreements for beginning payments on debts owed the United States will be described to President Coolidge by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon at the white house today.

Mr. Mellon reached Washington last night after six weeks passed in studying economic and political conditions in the old world.

Despite pronouncements emanating from French official quarters, Mr. Mellon returns to the United States with the report that France will do all in her power to avoid paying the $4,000,000,000 obligation owed the American government on war credits and accrued interest. Other nations on the continent, which have allied themselves with France, are expected to follow the lead of Premier Poincare and his associates controlling the government at Paris.

Mr. Mellon will find President Coolidge as determined as was the late President Harding to collect from foreign governments the huge sums they had borrowed from the American people. Mr. Coolidge already has emphasized the view that his administration has no intention of allowing the debtor nations to escape settlements for funding their debts owed the United States.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Up to City Officials.

Columbus, Aug. 20.—A delegation of Steubenville citizens called on Governor Donahey and asked him to take a hand in the situation in their city, where alleged disorders in connection with the Ku Klux Klan meeting there Thursday night are reported to have caused a tense feeling. Governor Donahey told the delegation the civil authorities will be called upon to safeguard the lives and property of the people of Steubenville and that nothing else could be done by the state in the absence of actual trouble.

Charged With Thefts.

Dayton, O., Aug. 20.—Raymond F. Sullivan, 37, member of the Steele high school, college graduate and fraternity man, was placed under $15,000 bond and ordered committed to the county jail by Judge Powell when he was arraigned in police court on a charge of grand larceny for the alleged theft of merchandise from a large department store here. Sullivan was arrested at the store where he was employed as a floor superintendent.

In Hands of Receiver.

Kent, O., Aug. 20.—The Kent Savings and Loan company is in the hands of a receiver, Attorney Paul S. Knight of Cleveland, following a suit brought in common pleas court at Ravenna by state banking department officials to enjoin the company from continuing in business. Available assets of the company are placed at $125,000. The net deficit is given as $24,988.

Patrolman Shot.

Columbus, Aug. 20.—Timely arrival of reinforcements stopped an incipient riot following a gun battle between Policemen Carl L. Lewis and Albert E. Tucker and Emmett Hamilton, 32, negro. Officer Lewis was shot through the left side below the heart and his condition is serious. Hamilton, badly beaten before he finally was arrested, is being held for investigation.

OFFICIALS FEAR NEW OUTBREAK

Klansmen and Anti-Klansmen Hold Secret Meetings.

STUEBENVILLE FORCE DOUBLED

Feeling Reported Bitter as the Result of the Rioting Last Wednesday Night, When Klansmen Were Attacked—Anti-Klan Meetings Held at Amsterdam and Dillonvale—Developments in the Case.

Steubenville, O., Aug. 20.—Arrows painted conspicuously along roadways served to guide members of the Ku Klux Klan to points where meetings of the order were held in various parts of Jefferson county yesterday.

The meetings were held in connection with the situation growing out of the rioting last Wednesday night, when klansmen returning from a big meeting in East Liverpool were attacked. Feeling is bitter and further trouble is feared.

The local police force has been doubled, but it is realized that if serious disturbances should break out this force would be inadequate. No disorder was reported yesterday and the heaviest task that fell to the enlarged police force was that of directing the hundreds of visitors who came not only from this part of Ohio, but from West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Attended by extreme secrecy, meetings of men hostile to the Ku Klux Klan also were held in different parts of Jefferson county. One of these was in Dillonvale, in the southern part of the county, and one was in Amsterdam, in the western part. There is reason to believe that similar meetings, all supposedly prompted by the same directing head, were held at other points.

The anti-klan movement in this county started in Dillonvale, which, though a much smaller town than Steubenville, has a population of much the same character. Amsterdam is a mining town. Like Dillonvale and Steubenville, its residents are preponderantly liberal and opposed to the objects for which the Klan declares itself to be fighting. Whether the anti-klan bodies are to be affiliated with the Knights of the Blazing Ring reported to have been organized in Pennsylvania could not be ascertained.

Darwin Gibson, local klansman, and John De Santis and Dominic Spinnella, Italians, the three most seriously injured in the shooting last Wednesday, are expected to recover, it was said at the hospital. It had been believed that Gibson could not live. Charges of shooting with intent to kill have been lodged against the two Italians.

Representatives of the Klan are expected to appear before Mayor Frank Hawkins in connection with Wednesday's trouble. A district convocation of the Klan is scheduled to be held in this city next Thursday, but should the meeting be attempted the leaders will be arrested, Chief of Police Blaine Carter announced.

MRS. STOKES' CHARGE

Weddie Stokes the Catpaw of His Father, the Woman Says.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Statements made by attorneys for W. E. D. Stokes, New York multimillionaire, that his wife has sued her stepson, "Weddie," for $1,000,000 for defamation of character to "belong the main issue," are ridiculous, Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes said before she left Chicago for Denver. Supported on the arm of her aged mother, Mrs. Stokes, her eyes dimmed by weeping, denounced her former husband and his attorneys. She cried out that "Weddie" was "the catpaw of his father," and said she had made every effort to persuade the young man to repudiate the statement that he had been overly friendly with her. She told for the first time how she had come to Chicago for the express purpose of giving "Weddie" an opportunity to deny the statement. She said young Stokes refused to grant her an interview because his father had pledged him to silence.

Electric Cars in Collision.

Columbus, Aug. 20.—P. L. Clagg motorman on the Columbus, New Albany and Johnston Traction line, suffered a fractured skull, and Motorman Harry M. Brown of the Columbus Rail-Light company has a broken left leg as result of a head-on collision between their cars on a single track near this city.

SICKLY SINCE BIRTH

Kidnaped Infant, the Distracted Mother Feels, May Die.

New York, Aug. 20.—Potential murder loomed large as the climax to the kidnaping of three months old Lillian McKenzie, sickly since birth.

An anguished mother is worrying more over the fear that her child will not be properly fed than over the possibility that Lillian may be held for ransom. For without a special diet, prescribed by physicians at the hospital where she was born, the child, who was whisked away from a perambulator while her mother was shopping, is doomed to die.

Mrs. McKenzie admits the possibility that the kidnaping may be a blessing in disguise—that the abductor may realize Lillian's plight and give her medical care which may prove beneficial. Police, however, are not so optimistic, and announced that if the child died in the hands of the kidnaper, charges of homicide would be made if that person was captured.

PROPELLER BREAKS

Seaplane Crashes to Water, Five Persons Being Instantly Killed.

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 20.—Five persons were instantly killed when a seaplane belonging to Albert Whitted, former naval lieutenant, crashed to the water after a propeller broke and tore into the wings. The dead are: Mrs. A. Harper, Birmingham; Albert Whitted, Pensacola; Frazier Patterson, Pensacola; Hugh Brown, automobile agent and M. Castleton, retired business man, both of Sylacauga, Ala.

The accident occurred at Camp Walton, a pleasure resort 40 miles from here. The plane was making a pleasure flight when the accident occurred. Lt. Whitted resigned his commission recently when he married. His wife was Miss Frances Brent of Pensacola.

Escaped With Payroll Money.

Cincinnati, Aug. 20.—Two bandits held up two employees of the J. H. Day company, baking and laboratory machine manufacturers, and escaped with the company's payroll money, amounting to $14,500. The bandits escaped from the scene of the hold-up in an automobile bearing a Kentucky license.

THE FARMER'S NEW POSITION

By WALTER W. HEAD,
First Vice-President American Bankers Association

The farmer today is more than a tiller of the soil. He is a business man. Raising crops is only a part of his business, if he is a real up-to-date Twentieth Century farmer. Problems of marketing, distribution and financing are equally important.

Walter W. Head

The complexity of our modern economic organization makes it necessary for the farmer to understand and assist in solving these problems if he is to succeed. In this new role—as a business man—the farmer steadily has advanced to a better position.

There was a time when the farmer was dependent wholly upon private marketing agencies, whose interest was not always identical with his own, whose greed for profits sometimes out-matched consideration of the farmer's need. Today there are many great co-operative marketing organizations that handle a large part of the farmer's crop and win for him more liberal treatment from the private agencies which still handle the bulk of his production.

Today the farmer also has his own co-operative agencies of credit. If not satisfied with the terms upon which his local capitalist is willing to advance money upon a land mortgage, the farmer can go directly to the Federal Land Bank, which, by reason of tax-exemption and other advantages incidental to its governmental character, can loan money at a rock-bottom rate of interest.

In addition, the federal government has established another group of banks which permit the local bankers—by rediscount privileges—to extend the farmer credit for his current operations on a more favorable basis than ever before. If he thinks his local bank is not sufficiently responsive to his need, this same legislation enables him to join with other farmers in a co-operative marketing association and arrange for credit direct from the government banks.

New Credit Facilities

For years it has been the farmer's complaint—with considerable justification—that he, alone of all producers, has been forced to market his crop on the buyer's terms because of his inability to use his products, in storage, as a basis for credit. Today the agricultural credits act authorizes the acceptance of warehouse receipts, on non-perishable agricultural products, as collateral for loans, the same as in the case of sugar or other commodities of commerce.

These developments have relieved the farmer from what seemed to be persecution by short-sighted, tight-fisted, grasping grain dealers, landlords and bankers—for there were some bankers who were guilty of this very thing, who thought of the farmer principally as a weak and ignorant opponent in a game whose only stake was the collection of a high rate of interest. The farmer's suspicion of the banker arose because of misunderstanding, because he judged bankers as a class by the derelictions of a few. Today, with these sources of government-controlled credit available at his call, the farmer cannot charge or even suspect that the bankers are conspiring to do him harm.

As the real farmer has taken advantage of these opportunities, he has made himself a business man. Like other successful business men, he is equipped with credit to finance his operations, he is able to make use of labor-saving machinery, he is able to barter with buyers of his products as their equal.

COMPULSORY THRIFT

In Kansas a group of power and telephone companies is trying a compulsory thrift plan, which affects about 1,200 employees and applies to every member of the organization from the president to the humblest day laborer. The plan requires that each shall save and invest monthly at least 10 per cent of his income.

Every month each employee must make a report to the general office of how much he has saved, and in what he has invested it. The investment must be approved by a committee competent to advise. Government securities, savings bank accounts, building and loan stock, payment on a home, even payments on furniture are allowed. If debts have been incurred, these must be listed and payments may be arranged on them, but no more are to be assumed. The idea is to make the employee live within his means and also lay aside something in a definite form.

Reports for the first nine months show that about 13 per cent of the wages have been saved, no single employee falling below 10 per cent. This amounts to over $100,000. Failure to report or to save brings dismissal, but in only two instances among the 1,200 employees was such action needed. Budget books are distributed and their use explained as a helpful method in establishing a working scale of living that will allow for thrift.

Cats and Catfish.

The unsuspecting cat has many kinsfolk in the matter of names. Conspicuous among these is the catfish. The naming of this common denizen of fresh water has been explained in more ways than one, and the reader may take his choice. One recognized authority contents himself with the statement that the name, as commonly applied to the fishes of the family Siluridae, is in allusion to the long barbels or feelers about the mouth, which have been considered as resembling the whiskers of a cat. This explanation is widely accepted, but other authorities set forth a probable reason for the name in the statement that when a fish of this species is captured and brought to the surface he makes a sound like the purring of a cat. Another offers both the barbels and the purring and throws in the added suggestion that the name was influenced by "some other fancied resemblance to a cat."—Nature Magazine.

Even Gypsies Changing.

To defend her race from the charge that they are "ugly, dirty, half idiotic," Fenella Smith, a gypsy princess, has written the first genuine Romany letter to appear in the English newspapers. She is a gifted woman, deeply versed in Borrow gypsy lore, and claiming descent from the Petulengo family, mentioned in Borrow's books, which to gypsies is what Norman blood is to the aristocratic English families. "Princess" Smith contends that real gypsies are handsome, clean, as clever as their critics, and gives evidence that the mysterious vagabond race is changing its traditional habits under the influence of the modern thirst for knowledge. Nowadays in gypsy camps here, her letter continues, it is not unusual to find the mother squatting beside her caravan teaching the swarthy brood of children to read and write.

Palmettos Are Wise.

The palms are wise. They toil and spin and weave cloth that is well-nigh as fireproof as asbestos, and wrap themselves in it. Palmettos start up into sun and air, then, says Nature Magazine, as if they "smelled danger," they poke their noses—their pushing points of growth—back into the soil and send their roots on for twenty feet or more underground shooting up here and there clumps of glossy fingered leaves, with stems wrapped safely in their homemade vegetable asbestos. They have pines for neighbors and fires are frequent. Flames sweep the ground, climb in pillars of fire to the top of the pine. They leave the ground black and bare. But in a few weeks all is green again with the palms, whose underground roots and protected buds have suffered no harm.

Ravines and Glades.

When the sun is streaming down, seeking the foliage of trees and perhaps also of ferns with splashes of light, few photographers can resist taking a picture. Yet these are seldom successful, because when the scene is produced in scale in a photograph the effect is often spotty. This spottiness must be looked for and dodged. If the work is being done against the light care must be taken to shield the lens from any direct rays. In such circumstances the minimum exposure will be found to be quite surprisingly long, and any estimate of it may well be doubled or trebled without any fear of over exposure. To attempt such subjects with the sun behind the camera is to court failure, as all sense of depth will be lost.

Ancient Adding Machine.

That the ancient Inca civilization in Peru possessed an adding and calculating machine has been revealed in the recent discovery by excavators of a knotted cord, or "quipu," in the ruins of a prehistoric tomb. The cord is 16 yards long and contains one hundred knots. Divided into ten unequal sections, these knots represent the odd numbers from 1 to 19. The sections are of different colors, including red, brown, yellow, blue and green, and are separated by silver beads, which represent the even numbers from 2 to 20. By using this simple way of counting, based on the decimal system, rapid calculations can be made.

Unhappy Blunder.

The Homiletic Review says: "At the close of the forenoon session of a ministerial conference, in announcing the opening subject for the afternoon session the presiding officer stated that Elder H— would present a paper on 'The Devil,' and added: 'Please be prompt in attendance, for Brother H— has a carefully prepared paper, and is full of his subject.' Imagine his chagrin when an uproar of laughter reminded him of the unhappy witicism he had blundered into."

HOOOSIER

— the Kitchen Cabinet that saves miles of steps

— the Only Kitchen Convenience that Adjusts Your Work-Table
to Suit Your Height

Gymnasium instructors have a little trick of asking new members of their classes to hold their hands above their heads and open and close their fingers. After a minute or two the student usually suffers an acute pain in the muscles. Yet opening and closing the fingers is a simple, natural operator. It's the unnatural position in which the arms are held which wears one out.

Unless your work-table is adjusted to the proper height to suit your individual build, you stand in an unnatural position which puts a muscle strain on arms and back for such movements as rolling dough and beating eggs.

That is why so many women wear themselves out at their kitchen work. It is also why women who own the new HOOOSIER are freed from such muscle-strains. For the new HOOOSIER gives you a work-table adjusted to your comfort.

An initial payment as low as $1.00 will put a HOOOSIER in your home.

THE FARMER'S NEW POSITION

By WALTER W. HEAD,

First Vice-President American Bankers Association

The farmer today is more than a tiller of the soil. He is a business man. Raising crops is only a part of his business, if he is a real up-to-date Twentieth Century farmer. Problems of marketing, distribution and financing are equally important.

The complexity of our modern economic organization makes it necessary for the farmer to understand and assist in solving these problems if he is to succeed. In this new role—as a business man—the farmer steadily has advanced to a better position.

There was a time when the farmer was dependent wholly upon private marketing agencies, whose interest was not always identical with his own, whose greed for profits sometimes out-matched consideration of the farmer's need. Today there are many great co-operative marketing organizations that handle a large part of the farmer's crop and win for him more liberal treatment from the private agencies which still handle the bulk of his production.

Today the farmer also has his own co-operative agencies of credit. If not satisfied with the terms upon which his local capitalist is willing to advance money upon a land mortgage, the farmer can go directly to the Federal Land Bank, which, by reason of tax-exemption and other advantages incidental to its governmental character, can loan money at a rock-bottom rate of interest.

In addition, the federal government has established another group of banks which permit the local bankers—by rediscount privileges—to extend the farmer credit for his current operations on a more favorable basis than ever before. If he thinks his local bank is not sufficiently responsive to his need, this same legislation enables him to join with other farmers in a co-operative marketing association and arrange for credit direct from the government banks.

For years it has been the farmer's complaint—with considerable justification—that he, alone of all producers, has been forced to market his crop on the buyer's terms because of his inability to use his products, in storage, as a basis for credit. Today the agricultural credits act authorizes the acceptance of warehouse receipts, on non-perishable agricultural products, as collateral for loans, the same as in the case of sugar or other commodities of commerce.

These developments have relieved the farmer from what seemed to be persecution by short-sighted, tight-fisted, grasping grain dealers, landlords and bankers—for there were some bankers who were guilty of this very thing, who thought of the farmer principally as a weak and ignorant opponent in a game whose only stake was the collection of a high rate of interest. The farmer's suspicion of the banker arose because of misunderstanding, because he judged bankers as a class by the derelictions of a few. Today, with these sources of government-controlled credit available at his call, the farmer cannot charge or even suspect that the bankers are conspiring to do him harm.

As the real farmer has taken advantage of these opportunities, he has made himself a business man. Like other successful business men, he is equipped with credit to finance his operations, he is able to make use of labor-saving machinery, he is able to barter with buyers of his products as their equal.

COMPULSORY THRIFT

In Kansas a group of power and telephone companies is trying a compulsory thrift plan, which affects about 1,200 employees and applies to every member of the organization from the president to the humblest day laborer. The plan requires that each shall save and invest monthly at least 10 per cent of his income.

Every month each employee must make a report to the general office of how much he has saved, and in what he has invested it. The investment must be approved by a committee competent to advise. Government securities, savings bank accounts, building and loan stock, payment on a home, even payments on furniture are allowed. If debts have been incurred, these must be listed and payments may be arranged on them, but no more are to be assumed. The idea is to make the employee live within his means and also lay aside something in a definite form.

Reports for the first nine months show that about 13 per cent of the wages have been saved, no single employee falling below 10 per cent. This amounts to over $100,000. Failure to report or to save brings dismissal, but in only two instances among the 1,200 employees was such action needed. Budget books are distributed and their use explained as a helpful method in establishing a working scale of living that will allow for thrift.

Cats and Catfish.

The unsuspecting cat has many kinsfolk in the matter of names. Conspicuous among these is the catfish. The naming of this common denizen of fresh water has been explained in more ways than one, and the reader may take his choice. One recognized authority contents himself with the statement that the name, as commonly applied to the fishes of the family Siluridae, is in allusion to the long barbels or feelers about the mouth, which have been considered as resembling the whiskers of a cat. This explanation is widely accepted, but other authorities set forth a probable reason for the name in the statement that when a fish of this species is captured and brought to the surface he makes a sound like the purring of a cat. Another offers both the barbels and the purring and throws in the added suggestion that the name was influenced by "some other fancied resemblance to a cat."—Nature Magazine.

Even Gypsies Changing.

To defend her race from the charge that they are "ugly, dirty, half idiotic," Fenella Smith, a gypsy princess, has written the first genuine Romany letter to appear in the English newspapers. She is a gifted woman, deeply versed in Borrow gypsy lore, and claiming descent from the Petulengo family, mentioned in Borrow's books, which to gypsies is what Norman blood is to the aristocratic English families. "Princess" Smith contends that real gypsies are handsome, clean, as clever as their critics, and gives evidence that the mysterious vagabond race is changing its traditional habits under the influence of the modern thirst for knowledge. Nowadays in gypsy camps here, her letter continues, it is not unusual to find the mother squatting beside her caravan teaching the swarthy brood of children to read and write.

Palmettos Are Wise.

The palms are wise. They toil and spin and weave cloth that is well-nigh as fireproof as asbestos, and wrap themselves in it. Palmettos start up into sun and air, then, says Nature Magazine, as if they "smelled danger," they poke their noses—their pushing points of growth—back into the soil and send their roots on for twenty feet or more underground shooting up here and there clumps of glossy fingered leaves, with stems wrapped safely in their homemade vegetable asbestos. They have pines for neighbors and fires are frequent. Flames sweep the ground, climb in pillars of fire to the top of the pine. They leave the ground black and bare. But in a few weeks all is green again with the palms, whose underground roots and protected buds have suffered no harm.

Ravines and Glades.

When the sun is streaming down, seeking the foliage of trees and perhaps also of ferns with splashes of light, few photographers can resist taking a picture. Yet these are seldom successful, because when the scene is produced in scale in a photograph the effect is often spotty. This spottiness must be looked for and dodged. If the work is being done against the light care must be taken to shield the lens from any direct rays. In such circumstances the minimum exposure will be found to be quite surprisingly long, and any estimate of it may well be doubled or trebled without any fear of over exposure. To attempt such subjects with the sun behind the camera is to court failure, as all sense of depth will be lost.

Ancient Adding Machine.

That the ancient Inca civilization in Peru possessed an adding and calculating machine has been revealed in the recent discovery by excavators of a knotted cord, or "quipu," in the ruins of a prehistoric tomb. The cord is 16 yards long and contains one hundred knots. Divided into ten unequal sections, these knots represent the odd numbers from 1 to 19. Many Accessories for Beach Apparel

Capes, 'Kerchiefs to Wrap About Head, Caps, Bonnets and Bags.

A 'kerchief is the prized possession of every bather, for it can be wrapped about the head, spread over the shoulders or tied about the waist—in fact, it can be used in numerous ways to enhance the beauty of the costume as a whole, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. When used for a bathing hat it is tied snugly over the forehead and the hair, with only stray wisps of hair allowed to show underneath. Then the ends, stiff though they may be, are allowed to shoot off in any direction back of one ear, giving to the headgear a sort of abandon entirely suited to its character.

Caps of rubber are not to be despised, for they come in the most gorgeous of colorings and are particularly charming when worn along with black or dark blue or brown bathing suits. In this way the mass of the decorative quality of the suit is concentrated on the headwear—a most satisfactory arrangement.

Beach bags are a necessity for carrying specific articles, and they add a decorative touch to the appearance of the costume, so they are considered a requisite of the modern bathing outfit. Those who like the latest word in fashion are carrying bags made in the shape of interesting looking French dolls. Those who have plainer tastes are confining themselves to square bags made of cretonne or oilcloth, though they insist upon having these done in bright and glowing colors. The dolls have ruffled skirts which open conspicuously to disclose the depths of a spacious bag meant to carry the many things that a woman needs at any hour of any day, no matter where she may be spending her time.

Sunbonnets on the beach are a fad just now. The girls don them when they come out of the water or before they go in—at any time, in fact, when they are loitering about in the sun. The bonnets keep the freckles and sunburn away from the face, and this is much to be desired, as these extra marks of the sun and summer do not help toward the furtherance of beauty. Sunbonnets are made in decorative cretonnes with plain linings that turn back just over the face and form a becoming background for the features. They lie under the chin in regular sunbonnet manner.

Capes are important items in the bathing outfit. They are short or long, the shorter ones being used merely to keep the least degree of sunburn from the shoulders, and the longer ones to cover a dripping bathing suit or to protect one from chilly breezes.

Percales Now Show

King Tut Influence

Our old friends the percales have gone through a metamorphosis. We know how durable they have always been and how fresh a little soap and water has been able to keep them. These characteristics they have retained. The change has come through the colors used. Up to now these have been confined to black, blue and red. But behold! even the conservative percales have not escaped the influence of King Tut. They are now a mass of all the soft colors of Egypt and of the Orient. Formerly this material was suited to the making of aprons, shirts and simple house dresses only. But now one may add it to the list of those used for household decorative purposes. Bathroom and kitchen windows will certainly look better for it.

Make Filet Negligee

With Trim of Ribbon

An unusual negligee is made of coarse filet lace over colors with ribbon of many colors laced through the meshes in border patterns. This is particularly effective if done in narrow Dolly Varden ribbons, many different ribbons being used and each having as its foundation color a distinctive pastel shade. Thus pinks, blues, orchids, yellows, greens and violets appear in pleasing combination. Picot-edged or gilt-edged ribbon is especially desirable, as it adds to the flower-garden-and-sunshine effect of the embroidery. A wider Dolly Varden ribbon may be fastened about a low wide neckline and tied in a large bow on the left shoulder.

Charming Oyster-White Two-Piece Sport Suit

Here is a dainty oyster-white two-piece suit in roshanara crepe. The fine knife plait in the skirt has an occasional box plait to break the monotony. The coat is embroidered with a design of Indian print inspiration in fine black stitching and ties with a large bow.

Eliminate Furniture

Which Is Not Needed

The selection of furniture has its sanitary side. First of all, too much furniture should be avoided. A room overfull of objects is difficult to keep clean and free from dust. Each room should be so planned and arranged that the least possible moving of heavy objects is necessary on the days when the vacuum is put to work. As the first principle of beauty is simplicity, so the first principle of good housekeeping may be said to be elimination of the unnecessary, which reduces to simplicity.

Overstuffed furniture undoubtedly has its place. But that place is not in an ordinary cottage or small bungalow. If it is selected, see that the cushions are removable. Sofa cushions and chair seats and cushions should be renovated from time to time. If you have any doubt of this, try even in a well-kept house, beating the cushions and see whether or not the dust flies. If it does, consider the renovator.

Just as the elimination of all but the essential in furniture is to be advised, so should there be few pictures. These well chosen and well hung in the right light add to the beauty of the room. But many cluttered together make for restlessness. The beauty of no one picture can be appreciated in such a gathering. Besides, they add materially to the task of dusting, as the backs need attention as well as the frames and glass.

Parasols Prominent

in Summer Fashions

Parasols will have a prominent place in the sun of this summer's fashions, notes a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune. One wonders why they are not always important for summer, for they certainly add greatly to one's comfort. But, like every other article of fashionable dress, they experience periods of neglect. Last summer they were revived as a fashion note after several years of inertia.

Strikingly new ideas appear in this summer's parasols. These lie in the shapes as well as the materials with which they are covered. Gayly patterned silks such as those used in dresses are treated so that they shed the rain and are used for umbrellas as well as parasols.

It seems as if every possible use had been made of the Deauville handkerchief, but now we see it in parasols. One wonders if there will be a handkerchief left in the world if manufacturers keep on exploiting this article.

There are beautiful silk parasols in pastel colors exquisitely beaded. These are featured by the greatest dressmakers of America, and made to match each frock, carrying out an idea which gained considerable headway at Newport last summer.

Beads Tied at Neck

With Ribbon Bows

Many and varied are the novelties in jewelry this season. Long strings of pastel-shaded beads are popular and are tied at the neck with small ribbon bows. Short strings are newer and are gaining popularity. They are tied tightly about the neck with narrow ribbon into a tiny bow, with long streamers. Beads are chosen with regard to color rather than design or quality and should match the ribbon sash or ribbon embroidery on the frock with which they are worn.

Sport Suit.

A new sport model of white wool sponge is draped over back and front panel of blouse with long loops of dark blue plisse ribbon two inches wide. It substantiates the report that ribbons are going to be as good for sport wear as for afternoon and evening affairs.

And That's Out. With all due pomposity and the proper legal flubdub, the sheriff started to impanel the jury, but Zeke Jones, though new in courtroom work, had his own ideas. He rose from his seat and declared vociferously that under no circumstances would he consent to serve. "Mr. Jones," inquired the sheriff with some petulance, "why is it that you object so strongly to being impaneled on this jury?" "Well," explained Zeke, "I may not have much education, but I got an inkling what this here word 'empanel' means, and I'm here to tell you right now that I ain't goin' to serve on no jury that's goin' to be framed in any way, shape nor manner."—Legion Weekly.

Had "Excuse Day" in Court.

In the reign of Henry II the day first mentioned in each term of court was called "essoign day," because the court then took the essoigns or excuses of those who did not appear according to the summons of the writs, notes the Detroit News. But as—by a custom traced by Blackstone to the Germans of the days of Tacitus—three days of grace were allowed every defendant in which to appear, the courts did not sit for the dispatch of business until the fourth day after that time. On the other hand, they continued to sit till the fourth day after the last return. The rule allowing days of grace in the United States was adopted from the English law.

The Jefferson Bible.

The Jefferson Bible is a collection of scriptural passages arranged by Thomas Jefferson. While Jefferson was living in Washington he bought two cheap copies of the New Testament and with a pair of scissors he clipped from them all the words attributed to Jesus. Some other passages in close accord with the words of Jesus were also added. These clippings he pasted in a little book, which he entitled "The Philosophy of Jesus Extracted From the Text of the Evangelists." Two evenings were spent at the interesting task, and when it was completed Jefferson remarked: "A more precious morsel of ethics was never seen."—Pathfinder.

Wild Flowers to Europe.

Well hidden among the long grasses of our fresh water marshes and low, wet meadows dwells a modest little orchid, the rose pogonia. A delicate rose pink and with a faint but delightful perfume, it is one of the daintiest of all our native orchids, says Nature Magazine of Washington. It blooms in late June and throughout July. Somewhat similar in form, although a resident of more northern latitudes, is the arethusa. Its long slender stem bears but one pink flower, with a delicate violet-like odor. So many of these plants have, in late years, been gathered for exportation to European hothouses that many a northern bog knows them no more.

Common Beauty.

Half an hour's roaming about a street or village or railway station shows so much beauty that it's impossible to be anything but wild with suppressed exhilaration. And it's not only beauty and beautiful things. In a flicker of sunlight on a blank wall, or a reach of muddy pavement, or smoke from an engine at night, there's a sudden significance and importance and inspiration that makes the breath stop with a gulp of certainty and happiness. I suppose my occupation is being in love with the universe—or (for it's an important difference) with certain spots and moments and points of it.—Rupert Brooke.

"The Beefsteak Church."

All Souls', the most venerable Unitarian church in New York city, was quite generally known as "the beefsteak church." This appellation of "beefsteak" came from the fact that the walls of the building are alternate layers of pale red terra cotta and pale yellow Caen stone, the latter imported from Caen in France. The little basilica in Monzo, north of Milan and on the way to Como, in Italy, after which All Souls' was modeled, also displays this alternate layer construction. The basilica was erected in 595 A. D. by Queen Theodelinda, to commemorate the conversion of her husband, Agalulf, to Christianity.

Two Much Worship.

A funny case came up in front of Judge Summerfield the other day. The man had sued his wife for divorce for lack of domestic harmony. There was no other man nor no other woman. It was just a case that things were not going well at home. "But I just worship my husband," the woman protested tearfully. "Sure," snorted that irate individual, and she places burnt offerings in front of me three times a day."

How We Get That Way.

The frequent repetition of any facial expression causes permanent alterations in the expression, and these correspond with, and suggest to the beholder the emotional state that has predominated; so that the man who is always laughing comes to look "a jolly man," the thinker a thoughtful man, and the woman who worries begins to wear a worried look that persists.—Darwin.

Wanted His Money's Worth.

"Why don't you discharge your present doctor and see if somebody else can't help you? Here he's had you in bed for three weeks now and you seem to be getting worse all the time." "I would make a change, but this fellow owes me $80 and his bill foots up only $49 to date. I've got to work it out of him somehow."

What Makes the Rumble of Thunder?

Why does thunder rumble? The path of a lightning flash through the air may be several miles in length. All along this path the sudden expansion of the heated air—a true explosion—sets up an atmospheric wave which spreads in all directions and eventually registers upon our ears as thunder. Since the lightning discharge is almost instantaneous, the sound wave is produced at very nearly the same time along the whole path. But the sound wave travels slowly through the air. Its speed is approximately 1,000 feet per second. Thus the sound from the part of the lightning's path that is nearest to us reaches us first, and that from other parts of the path afterward, according to their distance. Intermittent flashes and booming effects are due chiefly to irregularities in the shape of the path.—Popular Science Monthly.

Many Accessories for Beach Apparel

Capes, 'Kerchiefs to Wrap About Head, Caps, Bonnets and Bags.

A 'kerchief is the prized possession of every bath, for it can be wrapped about the head, spread over the shoulders or tied about the waist—in fact, it can be used in numerous ways to enhance the beauty of the costume as a whole, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. When used for a bathing hat it is tied snugly over the forehead and the hair, with only stray wisps of hair allowed to show underneath. Then the ends, stiff though they may be, are allowed to shoot off in any direction back of one ear, giving to the headpiece a sort of abandon entirely suited to its character.

Caps of rubber are not to be despised, for they come in the most gorgeous of colorings and are particularly charming when worn along with black or dark blue or brown bathing suits. In this way the mass of the decorative quality of the suit is concentrated on the headwear—a most satisfactory arrangement.

Beach bags are a necessity for carrying specific articles, and they add a decorative touch to the appearance of the costume, so they are considered a requisite of the modern bathing outfit. Those who like the latest word in fashion are carrying bags made in the shape of interesting looking French dolls. Those who have plainer tastes are confining themselves to square bags made of cretonne or oilecloth, though they insist upon having these done in bright and glowing colors. The dolls have ruffled skirts which open conspicuously to disclose the depths of a spacious bag meant to carry the many things that a woman needs at any hour of any day, no matter where she may be spending her time.

Sunbonnets on the beach are a fad just now. The girls don them when they come out of the water or before they go in—at any time, in fact, when they are lolling about in the sun. The bonnets keep the freckles and sun burn away from the face, and this is much to be desired, as these extra marks of the sun and summer do not help toward the furtherance of beauty. Sunbonnets are made in decorative cretonnes with plain linings that turn back just over the face and form a becoming background for the features. They tie under the chin in regular sunbonnet manner.

Capes are important items in the bathing outfit. They are short or long, the shorter ones being used merely to keep the least degree of sunburn from the shoulders, and the longer ones to cover a dripping bathing suit or to protect one from chilly breezes.

Percales Now Show

King Tut Influence

Our old friends the percales have gone through a metamorphosis. We know how durable they have always been and how fresh a little soap and water has been able to keep them. These characteristics they have retained. The change has come through the colors used. Up to now these have been confined to black, blue and red. But behold! even the conservative percales have not escaped the influence of King Tut. They are now a mass of all the soft colors of Egypt and of the Orient. Formerly this material was suited to the making of aprons, shirts and simple house dresses only. But now one may add it to the list of those used for household decorative purposes. Bathroom and kitchen windows will certainly look better for it.

Make Filet Negligee

With Trim of Ribbon

An unusual negligee is made of coarse filet lace over colors with ribbon of many colors laced through the meshes in border patterns. This is particularly effective if done in narrow Dolly Varden ribbons, many different ribbons being used and each having as its foundation color a distinctive pastel shade. Thus pinks, blues, orchids, yellows, greens and violets appear in pleasing combination. Picot-edged or gilt-edged ribbon is especially desirable, as it adds to the flower-garden-and-sunshine effect of the embroidery. A wider Dolly Varden ribbon may be fastened about a low wide neckline and tied in a large bow on the left shoulder.

Charming Oyster-White Two-Piece Sport Suit

Here is a dainty oyster-white two-piece suit in roshanara crepe. The fine knife plaiting in the skirt has an occasional box plait to break the monotony. The coat is embroidered with a design of Indian print inspiration in fine black stitching and ties with a large bow.

Eliminate Furniture Which Is Not Needed

The selection of furniture has its sanitary side. First of all, too much furniture should be avoided. A room overfull of objects is difficult to keep clean and free from dust. Each room should be so planned and arranged that the least possible moving of heavy objects is necessary on the days when the vacuum is put to work. As the first principle of beauty is simplicity, so the first principle of good housekeeping may be said to be elimination of the unnecessary, which reduces to simplicity.

Overstuffed furniture undoubtedly has its place. But that place is not in an ordinary cottage or small bungalow. If it is selected, see that the cushions are removable. Sofa cushions and chair seats and cushions should be renovated from time to time. If you have any doubt of this, try even in a well-kept house, beating the cushions and see whether or not the dust flies. If it does, consider the renovator.

Just as the elimination of all but the essential in furniture is to be advised, so should there be few pictures. These well chosen and well hung in the right light add to the beauty of the room. But many cluttered together make for restlessness. The beauty of no one picture can be appreciated in such a gathering. Besides, they add materially to the task of dusting, as the backs need attention as well as the frames and glass.

Parasols Prominent in Summer Fashions

Parasols will have a prominent place in the sun of this summer's fashions, notes a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune. One wonders why they are not always important for summer, for they certainly add greatly to one's comfort. But, like every other article of fashionable dress, they experience periods of neglect. Last summer they were revived as a fashion note after several years of inertia.

Strikingly new ideas appear in this summer's parasols. These lie in the shapes as well as the materials with which they are covered. Gayly patterned silks such as those used in dresses are treated so that they shed the rain and are used for umbrellas as well as parasols.

It seems as if every possible use had been made of the Deauville handkerchief, but now we see it in parasols. One wonders if there will be a handkerchief left in the world if manufacturers keep on exploiting this article.

There are beautiful silk parasols in pastel colors exquisitely beaded. These are featured by the greatest dressmakers of America, and made to match each frock, carrying out an idea which gained considerable headway at Newport last summer.

Beads Tied at Neck With Ribbon Bows

Many and varied are the novelties in jewelry this season. Long strings of pastel-shaded beads are popular and are tied at the neck with small ribbon bows. Short strings are newer and are gaining popularity. They are tied tightly about the neck with narrow ribbon into a tiny bow, with long streamers. Beads are chosen with regard to color rather than design or quality and should match the ribbon sash or ribbon embroidery on the frock with which they are worn.

Sport Suit.

A new sport model of white wool eponge is draped over back and front panel of blouse with long loops of dark blue plisse ribbon two inches wide. It substantiates the report that ribbons are going to be as good for sport wear as for afternoon and evening affairs.

And That's Out.
With all due pomposity and the proper legal flubdub, the sheriff started to impanel the jury, but Zeke Jones, though new in courtroom work, had his own ideas. He rose from his seat and declared vociferously that under no circumstances would he consent to serve. "Mr. Jones," inquired the sheriff with some petulance, "why is it that you object so strongly to being impaneled on this jury?" "Well," explained Zeke, "I may not have much education, but I got an inkling what this here word 'empanel' means, and I'm here to tell you right now that I ain't goin' to serve on no jury that's goin' to be framed in any way, shape nor manner."—Legion Weekly.

Had "Excuse Day" in Court.
In the reign of Henry II the day first mentioned in each term of court was called "essoign day," because the court then took the essoigns or excuses of those who did not appear according to the summons of the writs, notes the Detroit News. But as—by a custom traced by Blackstone to the Germans of the days of Tacitus—three days of grace were allowed every defendant in which to appear, the courts did not sit for the dispatch of business until the fourth day after that time. On the other hand, they continued to sit till the fourth day after the last return. The rule allowing days of grace in the United States was adopted from the English law.

The Jefferson Bible.
The Jefferson Bible is a collection of scriptural passages arranged by Thomas Jefferson. While Jefferson was living in Washington he bought two cheap copies of the New Testament and with a pair of scissors he clipped from them all the words attributed to Jesus. Some other passages in close accord with the words of Jesus were also added. These clippings he pasted in a little book, which he entitled "The Philosophy of Jesus Extracted From the Text of the Evangelists." Two evenings were spent at the interesting task, and when it was completed Jefferson remarked: "A more precious morsel of ethics was never seen."—Pathfinder.

Wild Flowers to Europe.
Well hidden among the long grasses of our fresh water marshes and low, wet meadows dwells a modest little orchid, the rose pogonia. A delicate rose pink and with a faint but delightful perfume, it is one of the daintiest of all our native orchids, says Nature Magazine of Washington. It blooms in late June and throughout July. Somewhat similar in form, although a resident of more northern latitudes, is the arethusa. Its long slender stem bears but one pink flower, with a delicate violet-like odor. So many of these plants have, in late years, been gathered for exportation to European hotbeds that many a northern bog knows them no more.

Common Beauty.
Half an hour's roaming about a street or village or railway station shows so much beauty that it's impossible to be anything but wild with suppressed exultation. And it's not only beauty and beautiful things. In a flicker of sunlight on a blank wall, or a reach of muddy pavement, or smoke from an engine at night, there's a sudden significance and importance and inspiration that makes the breath stop with a gulp of certainty and happiness. I suppose my occupation is being in love with the universe—or (for it's an important difference) with certain spots and moments and points of it.—Rupert Brooke.

"The Beefsteak Church."
All Souls', the most venerable Unitarian church in New York city, was quite generally known as "the beefsteak church." This appellation of "beefsteak" came from the fact that the walls of the building are alternate layers of pale red terra cotta and pale yellow Caen stone, the latter imported from Caen in France. The little basilicon in Monzo, north of Milan and on the way to Como, in Italy, after which All Souls' was modeled, also displays this alternate layer construction. The basilicon was erected in 595 A. D. by Queen Theodolinda, to commemorate the conversion of her husband, Agalulf, to Christianity.

Two Much Worship.
A funny case came up in front of Judge Summerfield the other day. The man had sued his wife for divorce for lack of domestic harmony. There was no other man nor no other woman, it was just a case that things were not going well at home. "But I just worship my husband," the woman protested tearfully. "Sure," snorted that irate individual, and she places burnt offerings in front of me three times a day."

How We Get That Way.
The frequent repetition of any facial expression causes permanent alterations in the expression, and these correspond with, and suggest to the beholder the emotional state that has predominated; so that the man who is always laughing comes to look "a jolly man," the thinker a thoughtful man, and the woman who worries begins to wear a worried look that persists.—Darwin.

Wanted His Money's Worth.
"Why don't you discharge your present doctor and see if somebody else can't help you?" Here he's had you in bed for three weeks now and you seem to be getting worse all the time. "I would make a change, but this fellow owes me $60 and his bill foots up only $49 to date. I've got to work it out of him somehow."

What Makes the Rumble of Thunder?
Why does thunder rumble? The path of a lightning flash through the air may be several miles in length. All along this path the sudden expansion of the heated air—a true explosion—sets up an atmospheric wave which spreads in all directions and eventually registers upon our ears as thunder. Since the lightning discharge is almost instantaneous, the sound wave is produced at very nearly the same time along the whole path. But the sound wave travels slowly through the air. Its speed is approximately 1,090 feet per second. Thus the sound from the part of the lightning's path that is nearest to us reaches us first, and that from other parts of the path afterward, according to their distance. Intermittent flashes and booming effects are due chiefly to irregularities in the shape of the path.—Popular Science Monthly.

SPECIAL ARTISTS

Will Furnish Music at Cincinnati Fall Festival for Two Weeks.

Officials of the Cincinnati Fall Festival and Industrial Exposition are endeavoring to put that event on a par with Cincinnati's famous May Festivals by obtaining the foremost artists in the country to sing during the two weeks of the Festival August 25 to September 8.

Charles Eisen, chairman of the special music committee of the fall festival, is working on a musical program for the entire festival and he assured Warner Sayers, president of the festival and the board of directors that this program would be one of the finest ever heard in the Ohio Valley.

Efforts are being made to bring McCormack to the festival for at least one week. Other available artists whose names have been mentioned include Cyrena Van Gordon, Maria soprano, Suzanna Keener, Frederick Gunster, Robert Ringling, Edward Lankow and Raoul Vidas.

Origins of Military Titles.

Commodore and commander are forms borrowed and corrupted from the Spanish comendador, a knight, a commander, or the superior of a monastery. The French have the word commandeur, the Italian comandatore. Commandant, however, meaning the officer of a fortified town's garrison, etc., comes from the medieval Latin commandator, a commander, and commandare, to command.

The old Julian cider mill now owned by Charles Goeller will commence operations next Wednesday, August 22.

HAMBURG COMES BACK AS A PORT

Germany's Most Important Commercial City Shows Increase in Shipping Over 1913.

Washington, D. C.—"Though Hamburg, the fourth commercial city of the world before the World war, has been doing more shipping in the first five months of 1923 than it did in the same period of 1913, to the average American woman's mind the name of the city suggests just one thing—the trimming on her grandmother's stiff cambric petticoats," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its Washington (D. C.) headquarters.

"Hamburg has always been a jealous rival of New York, London and Liverpool, the three other great commercial cities at whose ports more vessels dock than visit the German harbor. During 1921 nearly 20,000 ships, representing a tonnage of 20,000,000 and flying flags from all over the earth, entered the Hamburg harbor as against a net tonnage of 32,000,000 for New York harbor during the same period. Hamburg and Bremen have the honor of being the chief gates of intercourse between Germany and the United Kingdom and the United States. Is a River Port.

"Unlike most of the other great commercial cities of the world, Hamburg does not lie within a stone's throw of the ocean. About ninety miles from its mouth in the North sea, where a tributary of the Elbe, the Alster, has been dammed to form two lakes, Hamburg has been built, its earliest beginnings having been a castle of Charlemagne which stood on the spot in 811. Its harbor is broad and deep enough for the largest vessels. The docks are among the finest in the world, and will accommodate 450 ships at one time.

"Most of the German railroads ultimately lead to the city, and numerous canals bring their traffic to its portals. Hamburg has a very interesting, if dirty, old district along these canals, where the poor of the city live in dark houses and damp cellars. When the tide is out these canals become empty and the women and children of the district immediately run out and wade about in their muddy bottoms to look for articles which may have been dumped overboard by the boats. Three cannon shots are sounded when the tide begins to turn, to tell the scavengers that soon the waters will come rushing into the canals.

Old Customs and Costumes Cling.

"The State and Free City of Hamburg, comprising 168 square miles, is a republic, its constitution bearing the date of January 7, 1921. In 1920 its population of 1,091,074, more than a million of whom live in the city proper, made it the most densely populated of all the German states. Its average of more than 6,000 persons to a square mile gave it more than twice the density of the State of Bremen, the next in order, and nearly six times the density of Lubeck, the third in order. The public debt of the city at the end of 1920 was nearly three billion marks, spent chiefly for public works.

"Hamburg streets and market places are typical of those of many German towns. In the markets women may be seen wearing yokes on their shoulders from which hang big wooden buckets filled with milk. A few of them still cling to their wooden shoes and bright-colored costumes. And some of them still hitch themselves to their vegetable and milk carts and draw the loads through the city streets."

Girl Masquerades as Man for Nine Years

Paris.—Four years ago a young looking tramp called at a farm at Revel asking for work.

"He" said he was an Italian named Rossi, was born at Regio, and was seventeen years old. He did not look strong, but said he was accustomed to hard work. The farmer engaged the youth. Recently gendarmes came to the farm and informed Rossi that they could find no trace of his having been in Italy.

Rossi burst into tears and told the gendarmes, "I am not Italian, neither am I a man. I am a French girl named Suzanne Terlet." She then told the story of her adventures.

She was born, she said, in the Isere department, was twenty-seven years old, and left home at the beginning of the war with the intention of going to the front with a regiment. After many adventures she found herself penniless one day, and then thought it best for her to earn her living by keeping up dressing as a man and posing as such.

Now the girl has returned to her parents, who had not seen her since 1914. She has just learned that she has inherited 20,000 francs from a dead relative.

Hungary Has a Bumper Postwar Wheat Crop

Washington.—Hungary's wheat crop this year is 6,000,000 bushels larger than last year's harvest. A cablegram from the National Institute of Agriculture at Rome to the Department of Agriculture here placed the crop at 30,737,000 bushels, with revised estimates of last year's crop at 54,711,000 bushels.

GAVE VERDICT

Of Accidental Shooting in Case of the Death of Bernard Hagan.

Justice E. C. Fricce, acting coroner, held an inquest on the body of Bernard Hagan, of Columbus, who was killed by Officer Oscar Miller in this city, Saturday, August 11, and has rendered the following verdict:

"The whole city deplores the tragedy of the killing of Bernard Hagan by Officer Oscar Miller on the night of August 11, 1923. The widowed mother sad and brokenhearted has lost her son and her support. Officer Miller also, keenly feels the sting of that eventful night. Just how this occurred, nobody, perhaps, will ever know. Pursuant to law I have called the following witnesses to inquire and ascertain all the information possible in the case. Willis L. Henn, Fred C. Clark, S. Turney Ruggles, Felix Caldwell, Charles Reichelderfer, C. A. Kadel, O. L. Cartright, Samuel R. Greenlee, Floyd Rainy and George Volt Jr., the driver of the machine on that night. These witnesses being duly sworn told under oath what they knew about this tragedy.

"Also statements were made by the mother of the deceased and her brother. Nothing has been left undone whereby any information could be gathered or ascertained.

"Therefore, in view of my own observation and the knowledge gathered from the testimony of eye witnesses whose characters are above reproach and connected with this, the fact that the man trying to escape arrest and the officer in pursuit were strangers, that no hatred, animosity or illfeeling toward each other existed, my verdict is 'Accidental Shooting.'"

AMUSEMENTS

"Forget-Me-Not" the Metro picture which comes to the Met theater on Monday, reproduces with great fidelity the life story of two foundlings.

In the orphanage where her mother had left her as a baby, Ann Gordon had found the congenial soul, another foundling named Jimmy. But one day there comes a rich woman who chooses Jimmie for adoption and Ann is left alone. The other children eventually find homes but no one wants the little girl with a crippled leg. A street musician takes pity on her and she goes to share his meagre one room home. Thus the paths of the two childhood sweethearts diverge but thru the long years Ann carries the memory of Jimmy and from it draws inspiration and courage in her struggle to become a successful violinist.

It is a story of faith and love and yearning for happiness that is thoroly human from beginning to end.

The orphans are played by Gareth Hughes and Bessie Love who make the characters so lovable and so pitiful that there is a constant tug at the heart strings.

"Forget-Me-Not" is a Louis Burston production written by Henry R. Symonds and adapted by John E. Clymer. It was directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

Tracing Use of Lightships.

The first lightship, the Nore, was established in England in 1732, at the mouth of the Thames. The first in this country was stationed in 1820 in Chesapeake bay, off Willoughby Spit. Sandy Hook, now Ambrose, light vessel was established in 1823. A light vessel was placed off Cape Hatteras in 1824 and was driven ashore in 1827, and a ship was not established again in this dangerous position until 1897, after unsuccessful attempts had been made to build a lighthouse on Diamond Shoal.

KNIGHTED.

In recognition of his services in Belgian relief work during the war, Leopold Mambourg, glass manufacturer, of Lancaster, formerly of this city, has been named knight in the order of Leopold by King Albert of Belgium.

Mr. Mambourg also received a personal letter from BarondeCartier de Marchienna, ambassador of Belgium to the United States, notifying him of the award and congratulating him on the appointment.

Officials of the Cincinnati Fall Festival and Industrial Exposition are endeavoring to put that event on a par with Cincinnati's famous May Festivals by obtaining the foremost artists in the country to sing during the two weeks of the Festival August 25 to September 8.

Charles Eisen, chairman of the special music committee of the fall festival, is working on a musical program for the entire festival and he assured Warner Sayers, president of the festival and the board of directors that this program would be one of the finest ever heard in the Ohio Valley.

Efforts are being made to bring McCormack to the festival for at least one week. Other available artists whose names have been mentioned include Cyrena Van Gordon, Maria soprano, Suzanna Keener, Frederick Gunster, Robert Ringling, Edward Lankow and Raoul Vidas.

Origins of Military Titles.

Commodore and commander are forms borrowed and corrupted from the Spanish comandante, a knight, a commander, or the superior of a monastery. The French have the word commandeur, the Italian comandatore, Commandant, however, meaning the officer of a fortified town's garrison, etc., comes from the medieval Latin commandator, a commander, and commandare, to command.

The old Julian cinder mill now owned by Charles Goeller will commence operations next Wednesday, August 22. 18 July 1.

Judicial Politeness.

Referring to the exaggerated politeness with which the English judge, as contrasted with his brother on the American bench, dissents from the other members of the court, Law Notes quotes from Judge Bowen in Hutton vs. West Cork R. Co. as follows: "I need hardly say with what hesitation I differ from the view of Lord Justice Bagallay and Lord Justice Fry, and I unfeignedly say that I would rather trust their opinion than my own, but unfortunately the law does not allow me to do so."

GAVE VERDICT

Of Accidental Shooting in Case of the Death of Bernard Hagan.

Justice E. C. Friece, acting coroner, held an inquest on the body of Bernard Hagan, of Columbus, who was killed by Officer Oscar Miller in this city, Saturday, August 11, and has rendered the following verdict:

"The whole city deploras the tragedy of the killing of Bernard Hagan by Officer Oscar Miller on the night of August 11, 1923. HISTORIC ELMS

Washington Tree is Dead and Logan Elm Injured by Storm.

The announcement in the same week—last week—of the death of the Washington Elm in Boston, and that last Sunday's storm broke a large limb from the stately Logan Elm near Circleville, brings out the fact that while new England people Ohio is still "West" and belongs to the newer of the country, Ohio has its share of events that bear upon the nation as well as New England and the states that border on the Atlantic.

The event that made the Logan Elm Ohio famous took place before which made the Washington Elm historical. It was under the Old Elm in Cambridge that George Washington formally took command of the Continental army in July, 1775. But the conference of the Indian chiefs with Lord Dunmore of Virginia which resulted in the treaty that guaranteed to the people of Virginia freedom from murderous forays of the Indians from northwest of the Ohio river, was held under the old elm near Circleville in September of the previous year—1774. And there the famous speech of Logan was delivered either orally or by written message from the old chief.

It is interesting also in this connection to note that on the return of Lord Dunmore's army, while they rested at the Ohio, but still on the northern side of that river the officers of the Virginia troops met and adopted resolutions which, while they spoke loyalty to Britain, plainly declared that Britain must cease trampling on the rights of the colonists or they would rise up and strike off the bonds that held them to the mother country. And this in spite of the fact that they were then serving in an expedition commanded by the governor of Virginia himself appointed by the British crown.—J. H. Galbraith in Columbus Dispatch.

SCOTT GIBBS

Police Officer Carl Lewis, aged 37, 541 Armstrong street, Columbus, was shot thru the left side shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday night during a running gun battle between himself and Emmet Hamilton, aged 32, negro, which started when the policeman attempted to place the negro under arrest for disorderly conduct at Spring and Fifth streets, Scott Gibbs, colored, formerly of this city, a spectator, was hit in the left ear by a stray bullet. He was removed to St. Francis hospital by the police. His condition is not serious. The bullet which struck him was fired by Hamilton.

The negro was captured at Neilston avenue and Naghten street by Police Officer Tucker and Officer Lewis after both had emptied their revolvers at the fugitive.

"Indestructible Union."

The expression "an indestructible union of indestructible states" was used by Salmon P. Chase in a decision rendered by him when chief justice of the Supreme court. The case came up from Texas and involved the right of secession and the question of whether Texas was ever out of the Union. The court declared that the Union was intended to be perpetual, and in emphasizing the idea the chief justice said: "The Constitution, in all of its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible states."

SOCIAL CALANDAR

Carmi has again been called upon to give up one of her favorite daughters, Miss Pauline Finch, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Finch, becoming the bride of George Dewey McDowell, of Circleville, Ohio, Wednesday evening, August 15. The wedding occurred at the Presbyterian church at six o'clock, the church being filled with guests, friends of the bride. Preceding the ceremony Miss Emily Ball beautifully sang "O Promise Me" and "Because." As the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march were heard, played by Mrs. Ivan A. Elliott, Miss Finch entered the church on the arm of her father, they being met at the altar by the groom, the solemn ring ceremony being used as they took the marriage vows. Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, president of Muskingum college, New Concord, Ohio, officiated at the wedding.

Miss Virginia Gibbon, of Zanesville, Ohio, was maid of honor. Paul Finch, brother of the bride, was best man and Manford Finch, little brother of the bride acted as ring bearer. During the ceremony the organ softly gave forth the strains of "To A Wild Rose" which was composed by a relative of the bride. As the wedding party left the church the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were heard. The bride was simply, but beautifully attired in white flat crepe with orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a diamond platinum bar pin a gift of the groom. She carried a large bouquet of brideroses. The slippers worn were her mother's wedding slippers.

The bride's going away gown was of tan satin crepe, beautifully embroidered in cut-out maroon embroidery. Her hat, gloves and shoes corresponded in tints with the dress. Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. McDowell left Wednesday evening for a wedding trip, following which they will be at home at Circleville, Ohio, where the groom is superintendent of the Jackson township schools.

Miss Finch will be missed in social and church circles in Carmi. She was a member of a number of societies with the young people and was a member of the Home Culture Circle. She is quite talented, being a musician and a reader, always being a valuable addition to any program given. She was a member of the Presbyterian church choir and was also superintendent of that Sunday school. Mr. McDowell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McDowell, of Akron, Ohio. Among the out of town guests present at the wedding were Mrs. J. W. McDowell and daughter, Miss Alta, of Akron; Miss Virginia Gibbon and Miss Velma Brewer, of Zanesville, Ohio; Miss Mary Stinson, of Mt. Vernon, Indiana; Mrs. True Strong of Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Harry Endicott, of East St. Louis.—Carmi, Illinois, Tribune-Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Lewis, of West Franklin street, have issued invitations to the marriage of their youngest daughter, Miss Lillian, to Mr. Stanley S. Macomber, of Brookline, a suburb of Boston, Massachusetts. The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's parents Saturday evening at eight o'clock.

George H. Bentley, who has been enjoying a week's fishing on Lake Erie the guest of Raymond Searles, of Tiffin, at his lake cottage, returned home Sunday evening. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Hester, who had been visiting in Tiffin the guest of Judge and Mrs. George E. Schroth, Attorney and Mrs. W. K. Keppel and of Attorney and Mrs. J. D. Watson, who are spending the heated period at their cottage at the Country club, where golf and swimming were the diversions. Miss Hester was the recipient of a number of social courtesies during her visit in Tiffin.

Out of town guests, most of whom claim this city as their former girlhood home, are receiving many social attentions. Those who will entertain in their homes this week are Mrs. L. M. Mader, who will give a bridge party Tuesday afternoon; Wednesday Miss Grace Clarke will entertain the bridge club; Thursday Mrs. Arthur M. Wiegand will entertain in honor of Mrs. Ralph R. Upton, of Seattle, Washington; Mrs. Frederick L. Fickard and Mrs. Fred Gunning will give a luncheon bridge Friday and Saturday. The young folks will be entertained Saturday by Mrs. James Patton in Columbus.

Mrs. Orion King entertained Saturday to a dinner bridge at her home in honor of her sister, Mrs. Ralph R. Upton, of Seattle, Washington. A three course dinner was served to guests at twelve tables. The home was most artistically decorated in gladioli. The out of town guests were Mrs. Tabitha Yates Hunsicker, Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker, of Williamsport; Mrs. Fred Gunning, of Hollywood, California; Mrs. James Cheek of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and Miss Cromley, of Allentown, Pennsylvania.

The marriage of Miss Frances, only daughter of Mrs. Ella Riegel, of Salt-creek township, and Robert J. Young, sheriff of this county, was consummated at the home of the bride's mother Saturday afternoon at four o'clock. Rev. Mr. Beavers, of Stouts-ville, performed the ceremony. The young couple left shortly after the ceremony on a short wedding trip to Northern Lake resorts.

Of No Consequence.

The other day, since so many young people were called for to help on farms, one boy, who was willing and eager to help but wholly unacquainted with farm work was assigned to a farmer who was extremely careless in giving directions as to the work to be done. One day he told the boy to "grease the wagon." An hour later the boy came in and said: "I've greased every part of the wagon except the sticks that the wheels turn on. I didn't bother with them. They don't show much!"

HISTORIC ELMS

Washington Tree is Dead and Logan Elm Injured by Storm.

The announcement in the same week—last week—of the death of the Washington Elm in Boston, and that last Sunday's storm broke a large limb from the stately Logan Elm near Circleville, brings out the fact that while New England people Ohio is still "west" and belongs to the newer of the country, Ohio has its events that bear upon the the nation as well as New and the states that border on Atlantic.

The event that made the Logan Elm Ohio famous took place because that which made the Washington historical. It was under the Old Elm in Cambridge that George Washington formally took command of the Continental army in July, 1775. But the conference of the Indian chiefs with Lord Dunmore of Virginia which resulted in the treaty that guaranteed to the people of Virginia freedom from murderous forays of the Indians from northwest of the Ohio river, was held under the old elm near Circleville in September of the previous year—1774. And there the famous speech of Logan was delivered either orally or by written message from the old chief.

It is interesting also in this connection to note that on the return of Lord Dunmore's army, while they rested at the Ohio, but still on the northern side of that river the officers of the Virginia troops met and adopted resolutions which, while they spoke loyalty to Britain, plainly declared that Britain must cease trampling on the rights of the colonists or they would rise up and strike off the bonds that held them to the mother country. And this in spite of the fact that they were then serving in an expedition commanded by the governor of Virginia himself appointed by the British crown.—J. H. Galbraith in Columbus Dispatch.

cluded From Market.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The practice of evaporation of fruits when developed in any given territory serves to increase orchard returns by converting fruit excluded from market grades by superficial blemishes into salable products and to maintain fresh-fruit prices by absorbing a portion of the marketable grades in years of overproduction. The drying of fruits as practiced at the present time is largely a farm industry carried on by the fruit growers themselves as a part of the routine of harvesting and disposing of the crop. The plants in which the work is done are mainly small, their size being most frequently determined by the size of the owner's orchard, and there is great diversity in the drying apparatus, the accessory equipment, and the details of drying methods employed, with a consequent absence of definite standardization of the product. This would be expected in view of the fact that 252,289 farms reported the production of dried fruits in the census of 1919. The primary need of the industry is for such a standardization of equipment and application of labor-saving devices to the handling of the material as will enable the production of a better grade of product at lower costs.

Types of Evaporators.

Various types of artificially heated evaporators found by test of actual use to be best suited to specific purposes are described in detail in Department Bulletin 1141, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture on evaporation of fruits. The bulletin includes a description of model installations of labor-saving machinery, as well as a somewhat full discussion of improved methods of handling the various fruits in preparation for drying, as well as during the drying process. The drying installations are the most modern in character, but are of such moderate size and cost as to be suited to the means and needs of a particular case.

Community Plant Suggested.

In many communities in which growing of fruit is not a primary industry the aggregate quantity of unmarketable fruit may be such as to make advisable the construction of a community drying plant to which every grower in the vicinity may bring his surplus to be worked up. A number of considerations, which should be kept clearly in mind when the project of a community or co-operative evaporator is under discussion, are mentioned. Those interested in the subject of evaporation of fruits will find this bulletin of value and may secure a copy as long as the supply lasts by addressing the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Campaign Among Farmers for Cream Improvement

Creameries suffering losses due to poor grades of butter are urged by A. J. McGuire, dairy specialist with the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota, to put on an educational campaign among their patrons for improving the quality of their cream.

"Interest can be aroused in having all cream delivered at least twice a week and in improving the methods on the farms for greater care and cleanliness so that pure sweet cream will be delivered," he says. "The wide difference in price between good and poor butter results in serious losses under present conditions and can be prevented."

A continuous loss in the price of butter because of poor quality has led to the failure of creameries, Mr. McGuire asserts.

Straw Not Recognized as Valuable Cow Feed

Oat straw is not generally recognized as a valuable food for dairy cows; yet if given in reasonable quantities every two or three days they will clean it up with a relish, whereas if given them exclusively as a roughage they will push it over the manger and become as thin as a string of shad.

Plan Outlined to Kill Rats in Chicken House

If your chickens are being killed by rats, send for the government's new free bulletin No. 1302, "How to Get Rid of Rats." With some of the remedies recommended in this bulletin a whole family of rats can be killed in a single night. Two or three rats can kill dozens of chickens in a few hours.

Excessive Amounts of Corn Not Recommended

The statement that bundle corn is not good for cows is one of the half truths that often do considerable harm. Where cows are fed an excessive amount of corn, it makes what is known as narrow ration, which tends to produce flesh rather than milk.

Sprayed Potatoes Show Great Increase in Yield

Does it pay to spray potatoes? Last year in over 400 demonstrations well-sprayed potatoes showed an increase of 74 bushels per acre, and the use of disease-free seed resulted in an increase of 89 bushels per acre.

The regular meeting of Logan Elm grange will be held Wednesday evening, August 22, instead of Tuesday evening on account of the Klugston Chautauqua. The members are all requested to be present as a special program will be rendered for the college students who are leaving soon for school.

HE LOST TO WIN

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

CORALIE STRICKLAND, her sister, Billy Hannafoord and Jimmy Cross sat on the afterdeck of the City of Miami. Within a few hours they would dock at Tampa.

Suddenly Jimmy chuckled and resumed the conversation where it had dropped. "Why, William here, bloated aristocrat, couldn't do a day's work
to keep from starving!"

Billy flushed. "Can it!" he said.
"I could make work eat out of my hand."

Coralie smiled doubtfully. Jimmy,
taking advantage of that smile, burst
out as if suddenly inspired: "Why, I'll bet an even thousand right now that you can't leave this boat with a fiver
in your pocket and land in New York
by your own efforts!"

Billy hesitated and his lips tightened. It was a dirty trick to get him out of the way and leave Jim a free hand with Coralie. Yet, before her, he couldn't back down. "Well, I'll take you up," he said shortly.

These preliminaries explain Mr.
William Hannafoord's presence, the following day, in a Tampa employment agency. Seated on a bench beside half a dozen down-and-outers, he was meditating whether, in his case, "absence would make the heart grow fonder—fonder of the other fellow," when the head of the agency beckoned to him.

"Want this?" he asked, and handed Billy a letter.

"Please send another man to Bright Orange ranch—one with backbone this
time."
HARDY JACKSON.

"I'll take it," he said.

After a dusty tramp he reached the ranch. As he stepped on the veranda
a gray-haired man appeared in the doorway, and at his side a young girl.
"I'm from the agency," said Billy.

Jackson looked puzzled and the low voice of the girl broke in. "We want a laborer, dad," she said.

At this moment a huge car drove up
and a stocky individual climbed down.
"Take up my offer yet, Jackson?" he called.

No, I won't!" returned Jackson flatly. "Intend to hang on—in spite of
all that's happened."

The other shrugged his shoulders,
got back in the car and drove away,
while Billy wondered what it was all about. Jackson turned to him. "Come in," he said. "You might as well have a try at it. You won't want to stay."

After supper Billy learned how Jackson had sunk his all in the little ranch
and was on the way to making a good thing of it when real estate men were using underhand methods to obtain it without paying near its value.

"The latest stunt is night riding to intimidate us," said Jackson.

"Night riders!" repeated Billy,
thoughtfully. "We ought to be able to manage them. Let me see—tell me about it first, and then—well, I'd like
to get off a telegram."

With the sending of the telegram
Billy lost his waver, but in the light of the adventure which seemed ahead
of him he regarded the loss as trivial.

"Dear Jimmy—you win! Have given up attempt to beat it to New York.
Meet me at Grenoble hotel. Good little game up my sleeve. Need your help."
BILLY.

Forgotten was his resentment
against Jim. Forgotten was Coralie's doubting smile. His thoughts were full of the night riders—and Shirley.

The night riders came. Oh, yes, they came. At midnight of the very day that Billy and Jimmy and Hardy Jackson worked feverishly from the moment dusk fell. Scarcely, in fact, were the preparations complete when they heard the thud of distant hoofs.

"You're trapped!" yelled Jackson
out of the darkness. With a murmur of consternation the men spurred their horses about seeking an outlet.

"You're riding on dynamite!" yelled
Billy. "Prove it, Jim!"

Jim, some distance away, threw a switch. With a deafening roar the dirt flew in a cloud and the horses became almost unmanageable.

"Dismount, one at a time!" demanded Jackson.

Hands up, in a row on the veranda,
their captors regarded them.

"You look d—n silly," said William.
"We intend to march you into town in the morning, unless—" and he spoke directly to the man he had heard make the offer to Jackson the day of his arrival—"you prefer to offer Jackson
what he paid for the place and a good-sized bonus to boot to pay him for all this annoyance."

And the choice the man made was
the only one possible.

As for Coralie, she heard all about the affair from Jimmy, and, although Jimmy's arm was about her at the time and his ring sparkled on her finger, there was a wistful look in her eyes.

"Yes," Jimmy was saying, "Billy is going north with them. It is plain to see that Shirley worships the ground he walks on, and—well, believe me, old Bill's in luck."

Just Happened to Hear Him.
Oswald had the habit of asking for something to eat whenever he happened to be at a neighbor's house, so his mother told him he must never do such a thing again.

The next time he returned from a visit to the neighbor's she asked him if he had begged for anything to eat.
"No," he replied, "I didn't. I was just talking to myself about how hungry I was and they heard me."

HE LOST TO WIN
By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD
(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

CORALIE STRICKLAND, her father, Billy Hannaford and Jimmy Cross sat on the afterdeck of the City of Miami. Within a few hours they would dock at Tampa.
Suddenly Jimmy chuckled and resumed the conversation where it had dropped. "Why, William here, bloated
aristocrat, couldn't do a day's work
to keep from starving!"
Billy flushed. "Can it!" he said.
"I could make work eat out of my
hand."
Coralie smiled doubtfully. Jimmy,
taking advantage of that smile, burst
out as if suddenly inspired: "Why, I'll bet an even thousand right now that
you can't leave this boat with a fiver
in your pocket and land in New York
by your own efforts!"
Billy hesitated and his lips tightened. It was a dirty trick to get him
out of the way and leave Jim a free hand with Coralie. Yet, before her, he couldn't back down. "Well, I'll take
you up," he said shortly.
These preliminaries explain Mr.
William Hannaford's presence, the following day, in a Tampa employment agency. Seated on a bench beside half a dozen down-and-outers, he was meditating whether, in his case, "absence would make the heart grow fonder—
fonder of the other fellow," when the
head of the agency beckoned to him.
"Want this?" he asked, and handed
Billy a letter.
"Please send another man to Bright Orange ranch—one with backbone this
time."
HARDY JACKSON.
"I'll take it," he said.
After a dusty tramp he reached the
ranch. As he stepped on the veranda
a gray-haired man appeared in the doorway, and at his side a young girl.
"I'm from the agency," said Billy.
Jackson looked puzzled and the low
voice of the girl broke in. "We want
a laborer, dad," she said.
At this moment a huge car drove up
and a stocky individual climbed down.
"Take up my offer yet, Jackson?" he
called.
No, I won't!" returned Jackson
flatly. "Intend to hang on—in spite of
all that's happened."
The other shrugged his shoulders,
got back in the car and drove away,
while Billy wondered what it was all about. Jackson turned to him. "Come in," he said. "You might as well have
a try at it. You won't want to stay."
After supper Billy learned how Jackson had sunk his all in the little ranch
and was on the way to making a good thing of it when real estate men were using underhand methods to obtain it
without paying near its value.
"The latest stunt is night riding to intimidate us," said Jackson.
"Night riders!" repeated Billy,
thoughtfully. "We ought to be able to manage them. Let me see—tell me about it first, and then—well, I'd like
to get off a telegram."
With the sending of the telegram
Billy lost his wager, but in the light of the adventure which seemed ahead
of him he regarded the loss as trivial.
"Dear Jimmy—you win! Have given
up attempt to beat it to New York.
Meet me at Grenoble hotel. Good little game up my sleeve. Need your help."
BILLY.
Forgotten was his resentment
against Jim. Forgotten was Coralie's doubting smile. His thoughts were full of the night riders—and Shirley.
The night riders came. Oh, yes, they came. At midnight of the very day
that Billy and Jimmy and Hardy Jackson worked feverishly from the moment dusk fell. Scarcely, in fact, were
the preparations complete when they heard the thud of distant hoofs.
"You're trapped!" yelled Jackson
out of the darkness. With a murmur
of consternation the men spurred their horses about seeking an outlet.
"You're riding on dynamite!" yelled
Billy. "Prove it, Jim!"
Jim, some distance away, threw a switch. With a deafening roar the dirt flew in a cloud and the horses became almost unmanageable.
"Dismount, one at a time!" demanded Jackson.
Hands up, in a row on the veranda,
their captors regarded them.
"You look d—n silly," said William.
"We intend to march you into town in
the morning, unless—" and he spoke directly to the man he had heard make
the offer to Jackson the day of his arrival—"you prefer to offer Jackson
what he paid for the place and a good-
sized bonus to boot to pay him for all
this annoyance."
And the choice the man made was
the only one possible.
As for Coralie, she heard all about
the affair from Jimmy, and, although Jimmy's arm was about her at the time and his ring sparkled on her finger, there was a wistful look in her eyes.
"Yes," Jimmy was saying, "Billy is going north with them. It is plain to see that Shirley worships the
ground he walks on, and—well, believe me, old Bill's in luck."

BIG CONVENTION

Automobile People Will Meet in Hotel Deshler, December 5 and 6.

R. L. Brehmer, of the Brehmer garage, a member of The Ohio Automotive Trade association announces that the time and place of the next annual convention has been fixed for Wednesday and Thursday, December 5 and 6, in Columbus, with the Hotel Deshler as headquarters.

While no program has yet been prepared, motor vehicle men of national note, as in the past, will be present to lead discussions in the various phases affecting the welfare of the motor vehicle business. The annual meeting of members will be held at the same time for the transaction of all business including the election of new officers and trustees.

Legislation will form an important topic since this is the first meeting occurring since the last legislative session at which association procured the passage of the most important laws yet passed regarding motor vehicles. Following a report on the new laws, additional legislation will be discussed and recommended.

The association has enjoyed a very active and useful period during the past year under the leadership of Charles B. Rattermann, of the Rattermann Motor Service company, of Cincinnati, president. He reports that the growth and influence of the organization has increased very materially during the present year. This is evidenced by the legislative work of the association and by the improvement in the motor vehicle business generally, especially the decided betterment of the used car situation.

* The Hotel Stenographer * BY ROE FULKERSON

"I see they have arrested that Briski woman for killing her husband but I do not believe they can convict her," said the House Detective.

"I never heard about the murder," replied the Hotel Stenographer, "but if you will describe her I will tell you whether they are going to convict her."

"You are one of those Miss Sherlock Holmes are you?" jeered the House Detective, "you people who read detective novels make me sick. All that stuff about the looks of a criminal is bunk. I have seen some preachers who looked like burglars and some murderers who looked like priests."

"You don't get me, Kelly," replied the girl. "I don't know anything about criminals. I never associated with one except a guy I danced with him a few times until I found he was a bootlegger and quit him."

"I am talking about women. Having been one for 25 years I am qualified. Whether they convict this woman is entirely a question of her looks and grooming. Every woman ought to look as well as possible and keep herself well dressed for you can never tell when you will want to commit a highclass murder. The records show that the only women ever convicted of murder are those who wear a sloppy dress over an uncorseted figure."

"Nobody never heard of a bobbed haired, lipped sticked and one piece gown woman being convicted of murder. It simply isn't being done in these days of reconstruction."

"The hand that pulls the trigger rules the world and any lady murderer can get away with her stuff if she will just keep up the style of her clothes and look scared. Every lady wants to kill a man sometime and men are so plentiful and so trifling its a wonder it isn't done oftener!"

VILLAGES ATTACKED

Forest Fires Advancing Along the Riviera in France.

Paris, Aug. 20.—The forest fires along the Riviera have reached the villages along the coast and now extend for fifteen miles. Many hotels and houses are on fire. One hotel has been completely gutted, and two railway stations have been destroyed. Streams of refugees are pouring along the roads before the advancing flames. The countryside at Cannes and Nice is in a state of panic, as village after village is attacked by the fires. It is feared that there will be serious loss of life. Seaplanes have been engaged to carry refugees to safety. At last reports a violent wind is blowing, carrying flames pine cones and spreading the flames to new centers.

HOW TO ACT IN THUNDERSTORM

Expert Gives Ten Rules to Follow for Protection.

RUN TO COVER OR LIE DOWN

Get under cover if possible when a thunderstorm threatens. If this is not practicable, lie down. That is the advice which Alexander G. McArdie, director of the Blue Hill observatory in Milton, Mass., and professor of meteorology at Harvard university, gives in an explanation of the action of lightning prepared for the press. He gives what he describes as "ten good rules to help people take care of themselves."

"In a battle," says Professor McArdie, "100 bullets are fired for each soldier killed. It is something like this with lightning flashes. There are 100 discharges for every bolt of lightning that hits a person. Fortunately, too, of every 100 streaks of lightning about 90 are from cloud to cloud, or spill-over discharges of moderate electrical energy and are mostly horizontal, doing no damage whatever.

Straight Flashes Most Dangerous.

"About 10 flashes in 100 come vertically, that is, down to earth in a straight line. Some flashes come sideways and seem to be crooked, although there are really no flashes zig-zagging like the teeth of a saw as artists generally depict lightning.

"The intense straight flashes are the ones to be feared, and it is a silly person who stands out in the open when such flashes are seen. He invites trouble, but the invitation is not always accepted.

"At this time of the year thunderstorms are frequent and there are a comparatively large number of fatal accidents. One reads in the press dispatches that four men are walking along a New Jersey beach during a thunderstorm. There is a flash of lightning, one man is killed outright, one severely burned, and the others stunned.

"Now, there is no protection for a case like this unless one could carry around with him a metallic cover, well grounded. The first rule is then: Do not stay out on a beach or in a field when dark, heavy clouds are overhead or coming slowly from the west, or south. Get under cover if possible. If this is not practicable, lie down. Don't remain standing.

"2. Do not stand under a tree with thick foliage. You are forming a part of the line of discharge, since the body, more particularly the skin, if moist, is a better conductor than the trunk of the tree. More people are killed by lightning in this way than probably any other.

"3. Don't stand in the doorway of a barn or at a window in proximity to a chimney. There are currents of air or winds, and the lightning follows to some extent any draft or column of rising air, especially warm air.

"Don't Laugh at Nervousness."

"4. Don't laugh at anyone's nervousness during a severe thunderstorm. There is a good reason to be nervous. Even if one is in a building that is struck the damage is, in 98 cases out of 100, confined to ripping out plaster or knocking off slates and tearing off any projecting timbers. But there are times when the storm clouds descend to earth and amid darkness the flashes are heavy and numerous. At such times there is danger. It is dangerous to be near a chimney or a tree or a flagpole or a metal clothesline.

"5. Stock should not be tied near a wire fence.

"6. There is no particular sense in going to bed. Standing on glass or rubber or any good insulator, a woolen blanket, for example, will give one a little more security and a great deal more confidence. The probability of a person in an ordinary residence building being struck is very slight.

"7. If you are near a person who has been struck, make every effort to resuscitate him. Only rarely does lightning kill outright. Mostly people are stunned, and all that is needed is a little artificial respiration to restore them to consciousness. Of course, get a doctor quick.

"8. If you are in a trolley car and a flash comes in and burns the fuses with a roar and a blinding flash, sit still. The danger is over, and while you may be frightened you are not likely to be hurt.

"9. If you have a radio, better cut it out during a thunderstorm. The antennae should be grounded direct and all wires, as far as possible, kept outside.

"10. If your house is provided with good lightning rods you need not have much fear. Moreover, dwelling houses in city blocks are practically safe."

War on Golf Links Worms.

The Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., is experimenting with a gas which, it is said, will kill worms which ruin the greens and fairways of golf courses. Hundreds of clubs in the United States have asked the government for samples of the gas.

Tables Carried 100 Pounds of Gum.

One hundred pounds of chewing gum was scraped, cut, and chiseled from the tables in an ice-cream parlor at North Baltimore, Md. Two men spent a day removing the gum, which was a year's collection.

The difference in cost between good and poor clothing is not great, but the difference in satisfaction and service is amazing.

First Called Sleuthhounds.

Bloodhounds were first known as sleuthhounds, owing to their ability to track the deer, wild boar or the wolf. When the wounded game broke away and was lost, these good-nosed dogs were used in trailing the quarry by the blood trail, and hence they were called bloodhounds.

Straight Flashes Most Dangerous.

"About 10 flashes in 100 come vertically, that is, down to earth in a straight line. Some flashes come sideways and seem to be crooked, although there are really no flashes zig-zagging like the teeth of a saw as artists generally depict lightning.

"The intense straight flashes are the ones to be feared, and it is a silly person who stands out in the open when such flashes are seen. He invites trouble, but the invitation is not always accepted.

"At this time of the year thunderstorms are frequent and there are a comparatively large number of fatal accidents. One reads in the press dispatches that four men are walking along a New Jersey beach during a thunderstorm. There is a flash of lightning, one man is killed outright, one severely burned, and the others stunned.

"Now, there is no protection for a case like this unless one could carry around with him a metallic cover, well grounded. The first rule is then: Do not stay out on a beach or in a field when dark, heavy clouds are overhead or coming slowly from the west or south. Get under cover if possible. If this is not practicable, lie down. Don't remain standing.

"2. Do not stand under a tree with thick foliage. You are forming a part of the line of discharge, since the body, more particularly the skin, if moist, is a better conductor than the trunk of the tree. More people are killed by lightning in this way than probably any other.

"3. Don't stand in the doorway of a barn or at a window in proximity to a chimney. There are currents of air or winds, and the lightning follows to some extent any draft or column of rising air, especially warm air.

"Don't Laugh at Nervousness."

"4. Don't laugh at anyone's nervousness during a severe thunderstorm. There is a good reason to be nervous. Even if one is in a building that is struck the damage is, in 98 cases out of 100, confined to ripping out plaster or knocking off slates and tearing off any projecting timbers. But there are times when the storm clouds descend to earth and amid darkness the flashes are heavy and numerous. At such times there is danger. It is dangerous to be near a chimney or a tree or a flagpole or a metal clothesline.

"5. Stock should not be tied near a wire fence.

"6. There is no particular sense in going to bed. Standing on glass or rubber or any good insulator, a woolen blanket, for example, will give one a little more security and a great deal more confidence. The probability of a person in an ordinary residence building being struck is very slight.

"7. If you are near a person who has been struck, make every effort to resuscitate him. Only rarely does lightning kill outright. Mostly people are stunned, and all that is needed is a little artificial respiration to restore them to consciousness. Of course, get a doctor quick.

"8. If you are in a trolley car and a flash comes in and burns the fuses with a roar and a blinding flash, sit still. The danger is over, and while you may be frightened you are not likely to be hurt.

"9. If you have a radio, better cut it out during a thunderstorm. The antennae should be grounded direct and all wires, as far as possible, kept outside.

"10. If your house is provided with good lightning rods you need not have much fear. Moreover, dwelling houses in city blocks are practically safe."

War on Golf Links Worms.

The Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., is experimenting with a gas which, it is said, will kill worms which ruin the greens and fairways of golf courses. Hundreds of clubs in the United States have asked the government for samples of the gas.

Tables Carried 100 Pounds of Gum.

One hundred pounds of chewing gum was scraped, cut, and chiseled from the tables in an ice-cream parlor at North Baltimore, Md. Two men spent a day removing the gum, which was a year's collection.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

OF COURSE, if you can afford to buy "cheap clothes" we haven't a word to say, but thrifty men find them too expensive.

The difference in cost between good and poor clothing is not great, but the difference in satisfaction and service is amazing.
